A ROUND UP ON THE MONTH!

Tony Martin scandal

Commonsense in an insane country

Sound commonsense from the father of the burglar shot by farmer Tony Martin, who is now serving life for the 'murder' of his accomplice. After Brendan Fearon, 31, applied to be released under curfew, his father Joseph told him bluntly: "Mr. Martin should not be in prison but you should. Shut your mouth and finish your time. You make an idiot of yourself by carrying on like this."

Ethnicity debate

New Labour shows its true colours - and they aren't red-white-and-blue!

Robin Cook showed himself yet again to be one of the Labour party's weakest links when he spilled the beans about what New Labour really thinks of Britain and the British. According to the Foreign Office garden gnome, we don't even exist! Tony Blair, by contrast, knows that we do, but is doing his best - through selling out to Europe and enforced multi-racialism - to ensure that we won't in a few years time!

Foot and Mouth

Government incompetency continues over foot and mouth

The Government's massive cull of nearly two-and-a-half million animals has not only led to widespread pollution and cost around £18 billion. It was also completely unnecessary. Quite apart from the fact that a vaccination programme would have brought the foot-and-mouth outbreak under control far more quickly than mass slaughter, shocking evidence has now emerged as to how the overwhelming majority of culled animals would not have contracted the disease if they had been allowed to live. Elayne Addy is a solicitor with the Exeter legal firm of Stephens & Scown. She has now acted for one hundred farmers who refused to accept the Ministry of Agriculture's precautionary cull. In every single instance, MAFF officials have failed to contest her legal case against slaughter. And in not one of those cases have the stock in question gone on to develop foot-and-mouth. It's hard to think of a more damning indictment of the Government's brutal extermination policy, and impossible to find anyone who has saved the lives of more animals in this crisis than Elayne Addy.

'Real' IRA bombs

More bombs...terrorists released... sell-out in Ulster!

With more Real IRA bombs going off on the mainland, and several potentially murderous explosions narrowly foiled by the security forces in Northern Ireland, the failure of the farcical 'Peace' Process is becoming more apparent every day. All the Government's assurances about terrorist releases being linked to the decommissioning of terrorist weapons are now exposed as lies. Hundreds of convicted murdering thugs are now walking the streets, released by Tony Blair, but not one bullet has been handed in, and the only Semtex that the IRA have got rid of are the lumps they've used trying to kill Post Office workers in London. Another great success from the people who brought you the fuel crisis and the Dome! Now we learn that Martin McGuinness, who is presently Minister for Education in Northern Ireland, was a former IRA commander for Londonderry! What a disgrace!

Job losses

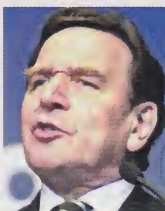

Motorola: globalism in action!

3,000 workers at the Motorola mobile phone company have become the latest big name British victims of economic globalisation. Sadly there's nothing unusual about that. But what was different about this closure was that it had been announced a month earlier, then postponed after a frantic begging telephone call from Tony Blair to the plant's American bosses. Blair supposedly got the closure stopped. Obviously a ploy until after the election was out of the way, but the Yanks didn't even wait that long. Could anything better illustrate the contempt with which our system politicians are regarded by (foreign) big business? Only perhaps the fact that five top Motorola bosses just awarded themselves bonuses totally £2.5 million to celebrate the company's huge recent investments in China. Globalisation has already gutted the real wealth-producing industries of this country and our once-mighty industrial base. Now not even 'new economy' coolie labour jobs are safe. The simple fact is that no-one will be able to count their job as secure until people stop electing politicians who put the profits of multi-national companies and fantasies about building a 'One World' global market before the interests of British workers. The Lib-Dems, Tories and New Labour are dedicated globalists, which means they're all happy to see our jobs exported to places like Korea, China and Taiwan. They're all the same - and all to blame! We will ensure that our manufactured goods are, wherever possible, produced in British factories, employing British workers. When this is done, unemployment in this country will be brought to an end, and good, well-paid employment will flourish.

Europe

German Chancellor calls for European government!

Gerhard Schröder, German Chancellor, has called for the creation of a federal European government and a United States of Europe! With sleazy politicians still claiming that the EU is just a "trading" bloc, the truth has been outed once again. Joschka Fischer, former German Foreign Minister said in 1998: "The top priority (is) to turn the EU into a single political state". The BNP says NO to the EU Supersate and YES to British freedom, prosperity and independence!

The truth about our national identity

"All things in creation like to stick to their own kind, tigers with tigers, elephants with elephants, red ants with red ants, and black ants with black ants. And the white[s]..and black[s]..are totally different with different cultures, different natures, different tastes. Now that I know my own stature and culture I am free."
These words were uttered by Muhammad Ali, the legendary black boxing champion.

When a retiring Conservative MP, Mr John Townend, stated that Britain's "homogeneous Anglo-Saxon" society was being undermined by immigration, he received the usual conditioned reflex of lies and smears from the politically correct anti-British mass media.

Yet when a pathetic little squirt resembling a garden gnome, going by the name of Robin Cook, stated that the British people are really a figment of our imaginations, and don't actually exist, he received praise from most journalists and sparked an orgy of lies and half-truths concerning the anthropological history of our nation from the bastions of the politically correct anti-identity movement. Let's inspect just some of those lies and demolish them one by one:

Britain is a nation of immigrants. Not true. According to DNA research by Oxford University's Professor Sykes, white people in Britain whose maternal grandmother was born here before 1948, are 99% descended from those who lived in these islands between 10,000 and 40,000 years ago! All the so-called 'immigrant groups' the multi-culturalists list, such as the Saxons, Angles, Celts and Normans were tribes of the same white race. The 'logic' to what they are saying is this: whites come to a white country, mix with white people and produce white people, and that makes us a mongrel race!

In any case, archaeologists are increasingly concluding that the invasions by these white European tribes involved only warrior elites who, with their tiny numbers, compared to the overall population, and by subsequently taking native wives, made very little genetic impact, however much they altered our culture and systems of government.

There are two things that make us what we are: Our ethnicity, and our nationality. Words such as Celt, Angle and Saxon, and in modern times, British, French and German, are all expressions of nationality, not ethnicity. Ethnically we are all part of the common European white race. Mixing within our ethnic group doesn't make the slightest difference; it is like tigers mixing with other tigers. Mixing across ethnic groups is, however, totally a different matter. And it has to be stated, the mass-immigration in the last fifty years has not been from peoples within our ethnic group, but from people of very different foreign ethnic groups.

The multiracial 'experiment' has gone too far to reverse it. Rubbish! The Government's own figures state that ethnic minorities are only 6-9% of the population. Even the latest census is likely to show them on only about 10%. This proportion, and the speed with which it is growing, are very worrying, but a prompt halt to further immigration, and the introduction of a sensible system of generous voluntary resettlement grants, could reduce the proportion to around 5% within a few years, and could keep it falling thereafter. The rush towards a non-white Britain will be stopped and reversed the moment the British people pluck up the courage to demand it and to organise to achieve it.

We need immigrants for our economy. Rubbish! Why does Britain, the country that started the industrial revolution and led the world for generations in technology, science and creativity, now need the help of immigrants to carry on? Why do we need to import more foreign workers when - on the old measures used before Labour's spin-doctors got to work - we have more than four million unemployed British workers in this country already? The answer is to retrain some of them, not bring in huge numbers of people who often can't speak English. The talk of 'foreign computer experts' is a con, most of the newcomers are from places without reliable electricity, let alone computers.

We're all the same anyway! A very complex subject, but not true. If this were the case, then why does the British Medical Association appeal for in-group donors for organ transplants? Why is that blacks and Asians have to take Vitamin D supplements because of the climate in Britain, whereas whites don't have to? Why do blacks dominate some sports, while whites dominate others? Why is there so much scientific evidence for innate differences in behavioural patterns and intelligence? No sensible person believes that any race is 'superior' to another, but only a liberal fool can believe that we're all the same.

Curry. This is the most desperate argument used, and blown completely out of the water by the fact that it was the British in India who invented curry in the first place!

These are just a few of the mountains of lies used by the internationalists in their war against all forms of identity. In order to achieve the globalised, one-world, one-ethnic group and one-government society the liberal-left strive for, all forms of national and ethnic identity must be eradicated.

This is why the likes of Cook, Blair and Hague repeat lies designed to undermine our sense of who we are and where we are from. The only force that can unite a population against exploitation by international big business is the patriotism that comes from a common identity. And, despite the efforts of the multiracialists, we still have this in Britain. Take my surname, for instance. The name Golding was brought to this land by the Saxons and can be traced back to around 800 AD. The likes of Mr Robin Cook may have an identity crisis, but I am proud of my rich British and white European heritage and roots and I am not going to betray them and my country to secure myself a place on the one-world gravy train, let alone for slavery on the global plantation.

With Tony Blair stating that he looks forward to the day when Britain has a black Prime Minister, while William Hague boasts that he looks forward to the day when Britain has an Asian Prime Minister, the only alternative to this betrayal is the British National Party, a party of British heritage, tradition and roots!

● Party Chairman Nick Griffin on the failure of the multiracial society

THE NIGHT BEFORE THE STORM: HOW THE MULTIRACIAL 'DREAM' DIED IN OLDHAM

The brutal racist attack on D-Day veteran Walter Chamberlain wasn't particularly unusual by the standards of multiracial Britain, except for the fact that it broke through into the national headlines, instead of getting a tiny mention on page seven of some small circulation local newspaper. But it highlighted both the fragility of the so-called multi-cultural society, and the immense power of the mass media. Just two days of widespread coverage of the incident led directly to hundreds of white football fans - mainly from Stoke, but from all over Lancashire as well - converging on Oldham. The excuse was a football match but the intention was to "avenge the old boy."

THIS IS LIFE IN MULTICULTURAL BRITAIN!

This is the face of Walter Chamberlain, a 67 year old D-Day veteran, who fought for his country during the Second World War. He was walking home from a rugby match one evening in Oldham, when a vicious gang of Asian youths attacked him shouting racial abuse and telling him to "get out of our area." This cowardly attack and the recent riots are just the tip of the iceberg. What would the hundreds of thousands of servicemen who died for this country think of this?

Images from recent race riots in Oldham and Bradford. The media censorship of these riots has been immense. Events that reflect badly on their multicultural 'experiment' are systematically in 999 cases out of 1,000.

According to eyewitness reports from local BNP supporters shopping in the town centre on the morning of Saturday 28th April, the first group to feel the anger of the angry whites was the far-left Anti-Nazi League. The ANAL had a stall opposing racism - but not for long! The crowd then chased a number of Asians out of the town centre, before dispersing for a while as more fans arrived in the town.

Rampage

The route to the Oldham Athletic ground passes along the heavily Asian Rochdale Road and as the fans made their way towards the game, groups of Asian youths gathered and hurled abuse at the first to arrive. Within minutes, however, the boot was on the other foot. According to reports on various football websites, hundreds of Stoke fans rampaged through the area.

Asian houses were attacked and smashed up, and Asians were dragged from their cars and beaten. These reports are borne out by the film footage of an injured Asian being taken away on a stretcher which was shown on one TV news broadcast early the following day, before abruptly vanishing from the public record.

Once the match was over, the returning fans, including many who had played no part in the earlier disturbance, were confronted by about 500 Asian youths, throwing bricks and petrol bombs.

As around 700 Stoke and Oldham fans united to chase them off, the police turned on the whites, beating them back and forming a police cordon to hold the fans in the same place under a hail of missiles from the Asian mob. A large number of police vehicles were damaged. Eventually, the police allowed the fans to head for the station and get out of town. Later in the evening, there were ugly incidents in Stoke between white youths and Bengalis, while Oldham itself remained tense. Crowds of angry white youths, this time all local, milled around the town centre looking for Asians. Another major race riot was only prevented by the presence of hundreds of police officers, a police helicopter, and scores of police vehicles blocking off the Asian areas.

Pogrom

One would have expected the media to go berserk over what was, in effect, a white pogrom against an entire Asian enclave, with innocent householders and law-abiding car drivers targeted just as much as the gangs of young Muslim thugs who caused the trouble in the first place. But the Oldham Chronicle's website changed its report early in the evening. Out went the references to the racial aspect of the trouble, and it suddenly became a mere football riot.

TV and radio news that evening followed suit, and the following day's papers were the same. By Monday, both the Guardian and the Independent ran greatly scaled down accounts of some of the trouble, although both knocked a nought off the numbers involved. All the rest of the media stuck to the official line. It took a whole week before the BBC finally admitted a little of the truth, reporting on its website that "police made 16 arrests last Saturday as bricks and other missiles were thrown at fans who had been chanting racial abuse." Why the cover up? Why did the left-liberals pass over a golden opportunity to portray young whites as racist thugs indulging in an understandable but inexcusable orgy of violence? After all, just for once, it was true.

Copycat riots

There can only be one reason. As the authorities learned to their cost in the black anti-police riots of the early '80s, they only have to show one instance of racially motivated mayhem on TV for 'copycat' riots to break out in multiracial areas all over the country. If it had been allowed to become news, the white revenge riot in Oldham could have sparked off similar violence in dozens of towns and cities. Bradford and Huddersfield in particular had already seen serious racial clashes just a couple of weeks earlier, and remain nearly as tense as Oldham.

So instead they pretended it hadn't happened. Unfortunately for the authorities, however, this stunt has in turn made many young Asians in Oldham even angrier. Young BNP supporters who go to school with them have told us how their Muslim counterparts see it: "One old white man gets a kicking, and it's front page news. But hundreds of whites smash up an Asian area and beat up on dozens of us, and the papers say f all about it."

Failure

And so we see the multiracists hoist by their own petard. Talk about it and inflame the whites. Or keep quiet and inflame the Asians. Either way is a sure-fire guarantee of further trouble in the future.

So we see in Oldham, as if in a telescopic view of the whole country, the beginnings of the end result of the failure of the multiracial experiment, unless urgent political steps are taken to reverse it peacefully while there is still time.

The BNP takes no pleasure in describing white riots any more than Asian or black ones. There is nothing brave about baying mobs hunting down innocent people just because of the colour of their skin. And, above all, when the trouble spreads and worsens - whether it's this summer, or not for a few more years yet - liberals who refuse to accept that it's all their fault for creating such an unstable mess in the first place will try to pin the blame on us.

This, of course, is as illogical as blaming the weatherman for the storm he predicted the night before, but the media and the authorities will do it anyway. That won't help them either, because literally millions of ordinary whites have had enough of the nightmare now. And they want someone to put an end to it. Don't ever doubt it again - our time will come!

PUBLICITY BONANZA

24 hours with Nick Griffin...

8.45 am. ITV call to arrange interview for Tonight with Trevor McDonald. The fact I'm standing in Oldham West is in today's Times.

8.55 am. BBC Radio Four call. Would I debate on the PM programme with black agitator Lee Jasper?

9.15 am. One of our Media Monitors phones. He's just heard the start of a Talk Radio discussion about the brutal racist assault on old Walter Chamberlain in Oldham. Caller after caller expresses exactly our views.

9.40 am. Channel 4 call to organise an interview in Oldham.

10am. Revolution Radio join the queue. Not Marxist cranks, but a big North West independent station based in Oldham.

10.05am. The Oldham Chronicle want to do a photoshoot.

12.05 pm.

Some of the flags that went up for St. George's Day are still up on the edge of town. Meet Channel 4. A carload of Asians pull up and hurl abuse at the TV crew. Two bits of the interview are later used on their early evening news.

12.40 pm. Round the corner to the Revolution Radio studios. Short interview that goes on air almost straight away.

1.30 pm Meet the Chronicle photographer. Shots of both me and Oldham East candidate Mick Treacy.

4.00 pm. In the BBC's Manchester headquarters for the Jasper debate. He is as rude and arrogant as ever. Get over various points about Asian racism.

4.40 pm. On the way out I'm collared by an oily presenter from BBC North West news. Moments later I'm wired for sound and off we go again.

6.00 pm. Meet the ITV crew. The interviewer is Martin Bashir, the top ITN man who made his name interviewing Princess Di. He tries to trap me into saying we're exploiting the situation, I explain that, by providing a peaceful forum for discussing the problem, by voicing the concerns of the white majority, and giving the opportunity of democratic protest, we're helping rather than exploiting. In the end, he gives up. The camera goes off and he smiles again. "You were brilliant. Logical, coherent, you're not a fanatic," he says. Rare compliments from a liberal!

7.15pm. GMTV call. Can I get into a studio at half-past six the following morning for a live piece on Oldham? Get to bed just gone midnight. Up at 4.15 am for the taxi they've laid on. GMTV's heavyweight John Stapleton comes a cropper when he tries to dispute my comment that what's going on is "ethnic cleansing of white people." A second crack of the whip an hour later. What a result!

TIME TO DECLARE:

Policies for the future

Immigration

- To ensure that the British people retain their homeland and identity, we call for an immediate halt to all further non-white immigration, the immediate deportation of criminal and illegal immigrants, and the introduction of a system of voluntary resettlement whereby those non-white immigrants who are legally here will be encouraged, but not compelled, to return to their lands of ethnic origin. The BNP will ensure the proper financial and material provisions are available for this, with the aim of halting and reversing the trend towards a non-white Britain, and ensuring that the British people have a homeland and retain their unique identity.

Europe

- We are for the best possible relationship with our European neighbours, but we are opposed to federal political unification. We stand for British withdrawal from the European Union. We believe that the nations of Europe should be free to trade and cooperate whenever it is mutually beneficial, but should not be forced into a political and economic straightjacket. We are opposed to the Single European Currency, and support the overwhelming majority of the British people in their desire to keep the Pound and our traditional weights and measures. In place of the EU, we intend to aim at greater national self-sufficiency, and to work to restore Britain's family and trading ties with Australia, Canada and New Zealand. The £1.8 million per hour net contribution Britain at present makes to the European Union will fund many far more useful projects at home following our withdrawal from the EU.

Law and Order

- The BNP will crack down on crime, and restore public safety. We will free the police and courts from the politically correct straightjacket that is presently stopping them from doing their job properly. The left-wing fixation with the 'rights' of criminals must be replaced by concern for the rights of victims, and the right of innocent people not to become victims. We support the restoration of Capital Punishment for premeditated murder, and as an option for judges in the case of serious sex attacks by adults on young children, in cases where a conviction is backed up by DNA evidence.

Economy

- The BNP calls for the selective exclusion of foreign made goods from British markets and the reduction of foreign imports. We will ensure that our manufactured goods are, wherever possible, produced in British factories, employing British workers. When this is done, unemployment in this country will be brought to an end, and good, well-paid employment will flourish, at last getting our people back to work and ending the waste and injustice of having more than 4 million people in a hidden army of the unemployed concealed by Labour statistical fiddles. We deplore the degree to which Britain's industry, commerce, land and other assets have been allowed to fall into the hands of foreign owners. We are pledged to ensure that all vital national assets are restored to British ownership. We also call for preference in the job market to be given to native British workers.

Defence

- We will ensure Britain's armed forces are able to deal with any emergency, and maintain British sovereignty over its territory. We favour a boost in defence spending, with priority given to training and advanced weapons. We will bring our troops back from Germany and withdraw from NATO, since recent political developments make both commitments obsolete. We will close all foreign military bases on British soil, and refuse to risk British lives in meddling 'peace-keeping' missions in parts of the world where no British interests are at stake. We will maintain an independent British nuclear deterrent. We will restore national service for our young, for the purposes both of boosting our defence capability and of giving them a sound training in citizenship.

WHERE WE STAND!

The British National Party has a coherent position on all present day issues. From immigration, crime, and the economy, to the environment, the British National Party embodies the views of the British people, with policies for a future Britain, strong and free!

Education

- We are against the trendy teaching methods that have made Britain one of the most poorly educated nations in the Western World. We will restore discipline in the classroom, give authority back to teachers, and give far greater educational resources to train young people in the industrial and technological skills necessary in the modern world.

Agriculture

- We see a strong, healthy agriculture sector as vital to the country. Britain's farming industry will be encouraged to produce a much greater part of the nation's need in food products. Priority will be switched from quantity to quality, as we move from competing in a global economy to maximum self-sufficiency for Britain. We will ensure a major shift to healthier and more sustainable organic farming. We are pledged to ensure the restoration of Britain's once great fishing industry with the reimposition of the former exclusion zones around our coast.

Health

- We are wholly committed to a free, fully funded National Health Service for all British citizens. We will ensure a root-and-branch overhaul, including slashing unnecessary bureaucracy, to provide better medical services. We will see to it that no money is given in foreign aid while our own hospitals are short of beds and the staff to run them. More emphasis must be placed on healthy living in the first place, through greater understanding of sickness-prevention through physical exercise, a better environment, tackling poverty and improved diets.

Transport

- We will make a massive investment in Britain's system of public transport to bring it up to the highest standards in the world. Congestion of our towns and cities must be eased by the provision of greater incentives to use rail and bus transport instead of private cars. Far more must be done to encourage the development and use of cleaner fuels.

Environment

- Our ideal for Britain is that of a clean, beautiful country, free of pollution in all its forms. We will enforce standards to curb those practices, whether by business or the individual, which cause environmental damage. "The polluter pays to clean up the mess" must become a fact of life, not an electioneering slogan. We want to create a quality of environment in Britain that is second to none.

Foreign Aid

- We reject the idea that Britain must forever be obliged to subsidise the incompetence and corruption of Third World states by supplying them with financial aid. If aid is given, it must be in return for certain services. The billions of pounds saved every year by this policy could be reallocated to vital services in Britain, including improvement to the Health Service and greater care of our old folk.

REPUBLISHED

Pensioners

- The conditions many of Britain's old people are forced to live in are a national disgrace. We are pledged to ensure that all our old folk are able to live in comfortable homes, with pension rises linked to the cost of living. Elderly people who have paid a lifetime of taxes and reared families should not have to sell their homes to pay for care, nor die of hypothermia because they cannot afford to heat their homes or eat properly.

Northern Ireland

- Britain must sort the problems in Northern Ireland once and for all. The IRA and its allies must be dealt with in the proper fashion, and all measures necessary to that end must be employed. We must cancel the Good Friday Agreement, the Anglo-Irish Agreement and declare that Northern Ireland will remain British for all time. We favour the establishment of a non-sectarian parliament in Northern Ireland, and, in the long run of a federation of the nations of the British Isles, in which Eire would voluntarily take her rightful place.

Foreign Affairs

- Britain's foreign relations should be determined by the protection of our own national interest and not by our like or dislike of other nations' internal politics. We would have no quarrel with any nation that does not threaten British interests. We will maintain an independent foreign policy of our own, rather than spineless subservience to that of the 'international community', the USA, or any other country.

It's time to take our country back!

BNP DELEGATION UNCOVERS HOW TALK SHOWS ARE RIGGED

After the mauling of Ann Widdecombe, the Tory Shadow Home Affairs spokesman on the Dimpleby programme by the audience several weeks ago, programme producers decided to widen the range of its Guardian-reading herd of studio bores. South coast Tories who were approached agreed to send people along, as was the British National Party. We were initially asked to send a dozen delegates for the audience, later to be restricted to five

After signing in, sipping tea for about 20 minutes in one of the cafeterias and filling out a questionnaire, the audience (of which probably half were of foreign extraction and including one asylum seeker), were escorted to the studio. To our utter amazement, a small contingent were already placed in the best seats, which were front row and in the centre. Later on, this contingent was very outspoken in its support for multiracialism and continued mass immigration into our tiny and overcrowded island (probably a delegation from the ANL or the SWP).

Ghost out of the closet

Mr. Dimpleby then presented himself from a side door and after some initial organisation of the studio, he explained various aspects of the show, how to act, to respect others speaking etc. He then wanted to do a warm up, by asking a few people their view of what sort of society Britain was i.e. was it a multicultural, multiracial society, or a white society that has a small but growing ethnic population. The first three gave the usual stomach-turning rubbish of Britain always being a polyglot nation of different ethnic groups. Then moving around the audience he asked BNP Director of Publicity, Paul Golding, who had his hand up, what he thought, and Golding replied: "Well according to Professor Sykes at the University of Oxford, in his latest DNA tests, all those white Britons whose maternal grandmother were born here before 1948 are 99% descended from those who lived in these islands between 10,000 and 40,000 years ago! Britain has been a homogeneous white nation since the Stone Age."

Politically Correct diatribe

This comment sparked a wave of whispers from those who had expected another Politically Correct diatribe. The soldiers of Political Correctness had been shocked. The next man asked, described what he termed a "transition" stage, from a white European nation to a multicultural society (of course the British people were never asked if they wanted this "transition"). Dimpleby then introduced the panel, of which out of three, two were foreigners, and the other a wet Tory. The other panel member, David Coleman, who was joining the programme from Oxford University via a TV link, gave a good performance, time and again ridiculing the PC outpourings from the other three. We were seated on the left of the studio, second row. It was at this stage that one of our delegation members spotted a piece of paper held by one of the camera people. It had on it a plan of the seating arrangements, the rows and sections etc. To our amazement, the section where the five BNP members were sitting had a huge cross against it! All ready to go, the audience was asked to be completely silent during the introductions. As the show started, Dimpleby announced that it was time to have a "fair and free" debate on the issue of "Immigration, asylum and race". A free and fair debate?

Liberal tripe

The first part of the show, which was concentrating on the subject of what kind of society Britain is, saw the most diabolical and ridiculous Politically Correct nonsense to be found anywhere, including claims that Britain is being "enriched" by waves of new immigrants, with one immature foreign student with a mohican hairstyle hailing "curry" and "rap music" as examples of this (conveniently forgetting that it was the British that invented curry!) The second part of the show, which concentrated on whether Britain "needed" new immigrants to help us survive economically, also saw lie after lie after lie. Thanks to David Coleman, the argument was narrowed back to the line that Britain "needed" only skilled immigrants to survive. Our delegation had their hands up throughout almost the entire show, only to be ignored in this "fair and free debate"!

The truth

We itched to ask why was it that Great Britain, which has led the world in economics, technology and science for hundreds of years, and pioneered the industrial revolution, now need the help of "skilled" immigrants? And why does Britain need to import yet more foreign workers when we have four million unemployed workers of our own who we should rightfully find employment for first? The argument that Britain "needs" skilled immigrants to help us survive in a global market is a poorly thought out attempted justification for yet more mass-immigration.

Yet our entire delegation was ignored throughout the whole show. In fact, almost the entire left-hand section of the audience was omitted from the show to make sure no Politically Incorrect thoughts were aired! And, had we managed to say a word in edged-ways, it would have probably been edited out by those champions of "democracy".

Benefits

The good thing to come out of the whole shameful episode, we concluded afterwards, was the fact that we made lots of new friends from the audience afterwards whom we told about the British National Party. And it was good experience. We also concluded that it was a well-intentioned mistake to let loose before the programme in the warm up session, for this may have played a part in our later shut-out. Finally, our discovery of the studio maps given to cameramen gives us a better understanding than ever of how the liberals rig such 'debates'.

Paul Golding

We itched to ask why was it that Great Britain, which has led the world in economics, technology and science for hundreds of years, and pioneered the industrial revolution, now need the help of 'skilled' immigrants?

Welcome to the BNP!

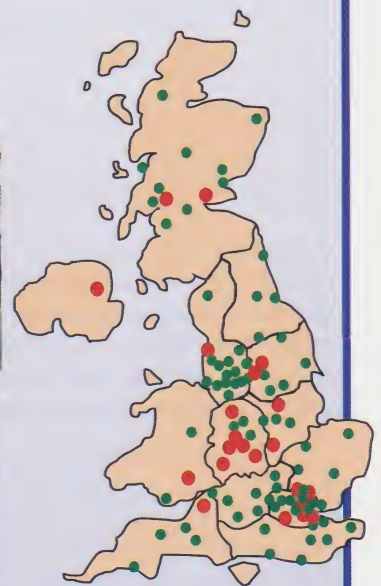

Many of those reading this magazine are wondering whether to join Britain's fastest growing patriotic party. Most will be enquirers from the recent General Election. Our party isn't like all the others; we aren't here to lie and deceive, to promise everything to everyone and then disappear once elected. The BNP is here to take sensible political action to save Britain and secure a future for our children!

A selection of photos from BNP events over the last year. The BNP isn't just boring politics! We hold all sorts of cultural festivals and events.

The BNP's Advisory Council: this party body inspects the party's accounts, discusses vital issues and decisions, and is made up of the party's top officials

Right: The BNP has over 100 groups and branches nationwide and is growing fast!

LATEST, AND LAST, PATRIOT OUT NOW!

Britain's best patriotic independently produced magazine has just announced that it is to throw in its lot with the BNP's official magazine, Identity. Patriot was founded by Tony Lecomber in 1997.

Patriot championed the moderate approach of modern nationalism well before it became the norm in the party. This, of course, was the reason why Patriot was launched in the first place and, now that the argument has been won and the British National Party is so firmly on a sensible, mainstream path, it is why its editor has decided that the magazine is now surplus to requirements.

Issue eight will therefore be the last Patriot. As stylish as ever, its dramatic front cover is linked to the main article. This is a 'warts and all' history of the early days of the BNP. Other articles include a blow-by-blow account of the Battle of Trafalgar, and a photo-feature on of 'A Year of Progress'. This is indicative of the way in which Patriot's editor is happy to acknowledge the way in which Identity has become the flagship for sensible nationalism and the BNP. We can only commend Tony Lecomber for his selfless decision, and for all the work he did through Patriot to put the British National Party on the path to victory!

Copies of the final issue of Patriot can be obtained by sending £3 to PO Box 1032, Woodford Green, IG8 9GN. Please make cheques/POs payable to 'Patriot'.

THE COST OF 'ETHNIC' CRIME IN MULTIRACIAL BRITAIN: £5.7 BILLION!

SUMMARY

- Blacks are 53 times more likely to commit inter-racial homicide than whites, while Asians are 17 times more likely.
- Non-whites are at least 26 times - and up to 43 times more likely to commit a racially motivated offence against a white person than vice-versa.
- Ethnic crime costs Britain at least £5.7 billion each year as a result of 85,000 serious offences, or about one incident every six minutes.

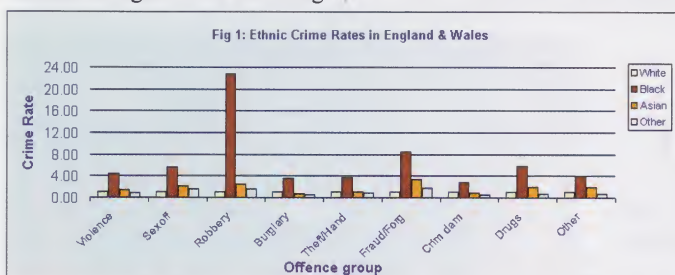

It has long been known that immigration has led to higher levels of crime, but the mass media and old political parties have always been reluctant to confront the facts head on. However, a study of recent government documents can now enable a quantitative analysis on the levels of ethnic crime in Britain today. Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System is published by the Home Office. The 2000 edition provides extensive information on the ethnic groups of persons arrested for a variety of serious crimes over 1999/2000 for each major police force area in England and Wales. With the data provided it is then possible to compare rates of crime between different ethnic groups.

The Human Cost

Figure 1 shows the crime rates for each ethnic group using white levels of crime as a benchmark adjusted for comparison against all other ethnic groups.

Robbery (which includes mugging) is committed by blacks at a rate of nearly 23 times that for whites, with fraud and forgery 8.5 times higher. Sex and drug

With the rates of criminal activity known for each ethnic group it is possible to calculate the excess number of offences committed by ethnics in Britain, by comparing the number of offences committed by Britain's ethnic population with a hypothetical white population of equal size. Any difference in crime levels between the white offences are committed by blacks at about 5.7 times the white rate. Asians commit fraud and forgery at 3.4 times the white rate with robbery at 2.4 times, while levels of sexual and drug offences are about twice that for whites.

In contrast, Asians commit fewer burglary and criminal damage offences than whites. On average, blacks commit offences at a rate 580 percent greater than whites while Asians have a 75 percent higher rate. 'Other' ethnic groups are only slightly more likely to commit criminal offences than whites.

and ethnic populations is therefore a direct consequence of Britain's multiracial society. In a homogenous, white Britain these 'excess' crimes would simply not exist.

More likely

Figure 2 shows that an excess of ethnic crime is committed in every offence. Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System also covers data regarding the number of racially motivated incidents in England and Wales in 1999.

The data has been adjusted to account for certain group's reluctance to report such incidents to the authorities. Of the 280,000 racially motivated incidents, 182,000 (65 percent) were committed against White people.

This means that 7 percent of the population (ethnic minorities) were responsible for 65 percent of all racially motivated incidents, making them nearly 26 times more likely to commit such an offence than a white person.

Race attacks

A similar calculation using the 1999 British Crime Survey, published last year, produces an even more shocking figure: a non-white is 43 times more likely to commit a racial attack on a white person than the other way around.

The lower figure fails to take into account the fact that not all racially motivated incidents against ethnic people are perpetrated by whites, many are inter-ethnic, such as black against Asian or Pakistani against Indian. Of further interest are the figures for inter-racial homicide.

During the three year period 1997 to 2000 there were 149 inter-racial homicides of which 82 (or 55 percent) were white victims. Blacks killed 56 whites and 3 Asians, while Asians killed 26 whites and 6 blacks. In contrast whites killed 58 non-whites, or 39 percent of the total, meaning that blacks were 53 times more likely to commit inter-racial homicide than whites while Asians were 17 times more likely.

The Economic Cost

By the same process of comparing Britain's ethnic population with a hypothetical white population of equal size it is also possible to estimate the financial cost of Britain's excess ethnic crime.

Home Office Research Study 217 The economic and social costs of crime attempts to assess the economic impact of crime on Britain.

Estimates are made for the costs of security, insurance, property lost, emotional and physical impact, lost output, victim services, health services, and the criminal justice system itself (including police).

Cost of crime

The average cost for each type of crime is then multiplied by the number of incidents, resulting in a total cost.

When excess ethnic crimes are calculated as a fraction of the total cost of crime the figure comes to £5.7 billion, or about 10 percent of all crime committed.

Fraud and forgery account for 43 percent of this total at £2.42 billion, with violent crime costing £1.25 billion. Next are robberies at £731 million followed by theft/handling costing £389 million while sexual and 'other' offences tie at £270 million each.

Note: The fact that some non-whites carry out crimes which produce the disproportionate figures discussed here does not, of course, mean that most non-whites are criminals. They are not. The vast majority are perfectly decent, law-abiding citizens. Nor do we believe that some whites are not criminals, because they clearly are, and they should be dealt with far more harshly.

More police are needed, and the police force as a whole needs to be relieved of the straightjacket of Political Correctness

PARTY STATEMENT

The British National Party, Conservatives, and social justice

Many of the new enquirers reading this issue of Identity will be refugees from William Hague's multicultural Conservative party. Like so many other people who have contacted the BNP in recent weeks, they will have seen in Hague's 'foreign land' speech a last glimmer of hope that his party might still find the guts to stand up for Britain. But within just a few days they will have had that last hope dashed by the 14-pint skinhead's grovelling to Asians in Bradford and his humiliation of the honest but rather spineless Tory MP, John Townend.

This was the final straw for far more Conservatives - officials as well as activists and voters - than the liberal/homosexual clique running Tory Central Office have yet realised.

It will surely increase the steady trickle of ex-Conservatives who have been crossing over to the British National Party in recent years. The newcomers will join earlier political refugees from the same source already making a very valuable contribution to our organisational efforts. The BNP's National Press Officer, Dr. Edwards, our Enquiries Secretary, Jean Thomas, and our Director of Administration, Chris Green, are all examples of this phenomenon and have, between them, helped to transform the party's 'backroom' operation. And there is still plenty of work for the keenest of the new wave of disillusioned Conservatives coming on board at the moment.

Abandoned

But recruiting more ex-Conservatives is not the same as becoming a conservative party. The BNP does indeed stand for tradition, law and order, patriotism, family values, discipline in schools, the preservation of British identity, and the other virtues that the Tory party has so clearly abandoned.

But we also uphold some of the virtues that the Labour party has abandoned as well. We stand for social justice for all our people. We are determined that the future British nationalist government will do whatever is necessary - including huge public works operations - to return real jobs and hope to the sink estates in the old heavy industrial areas.

We are utterly opposed to globalisation and the idea that it's right for British workers to have to compete with cheap labour from overseas, even in instances when the foreign sweatshops concerned are owned by companies quoted on the London Stock Market and make fat profits for shareholders in Hampstead and in leafy lanes in the Home Counties.

Old dogma out the window

When we set about rebuilding British industry behind protective tariff barriers, we have no intention of subsidising the same class of selfish traitors who lived off the sweat of

We know from experience that most of the ordinary Conservatives who are now so desperately disillusioned with their old party are not reactionary Colonel Blimp types, and have no problem with accepting the social justice demands of genuine nationalism. These people are welcome, and, to be realistic, they are badly needed, because they often bring the managerial and organisational skills, and the money, that the BNP needs in its drive for the political big-time.

But recent weeks have also seen approaches from people a bit higher up the Tory party's greasy pole, and a few of them have baulked at the fact that we aren't just an anti-immigration, anti-EU party, but also have a firm commitment to social justice. They haven't taken too kindly to our economic policy which, being based on our recognition of the moral and economic value of private ownership, seeks to extend the ownership of economic wealth to as many individual Britons as possible, rather than allowing the concentration of wealth and power in the hands of an ever smaller number of the super rich.

Even if it wasn't for the new laws on political funding that prevent our accepting 'anonymous' donations, there's no amount of money or behind-the-scenes support that such people could give us to make us shift from this position.

The British National Party exists to come to power for the benefit of the people of this country. The gathering racial crisis means that we will come to power overwhelmingly on the back of one issue, but once we are in power we have a fully developed set of principles to put into practice.

Join us by all means, but understand that those principles are not for sale.

ordinary workers for as long as possible, and then set about importing cheap non-white labour or exporting their capital and factories to the Far East as soon as bad government gave them the opportunity to do so. Britain's new industries will be run in a variety of ways, including workers' co-operative, private ownership and public companies, but all will have to work within the framework of the national interest. Margaret Thatcher's destructive doctrine that "there is no such thing as society" will be out of the window in the future BNP Britain.

PROGRESS EVEI

Bexley BNP campaigns for closure of planned asylum seeker hostel - and wins!

• Yet another planned hostel was being established in central Slade Green in a former popular local pub, the Railway Tavern to house Chinese and Kosovan asylum seekers. This would have been the second in the area, backing up our claim that Slade Green and Erith were being used as the main placement area for asylum seekers. Now, thanks to the efforts of Colin Smith and his local team, the asylum seeker hostel has been closed and the premises have now been privately purchased and are presently being converted back to a public house. Bexley BNP's new newsletter states: "This is Colin Smith in action: despite not being in local office he still manages to get what local people want! ...thanks to his efforts, local people's wishes have been taken note of by the ignorant Labour and Conservative local bureaucrats! Imagine what he could achieve if he was elected!"

Colin Smith

BNP celebrates St. George's Day

• Last month saw St. George's Day celebrations in Leeds, Bolton and Darlington. In Leeds, Tony McDonnell, Ian Christie and Nick Griffin addressed around 80 members and supporters. In Bolton, around 20 local members attended a fund-raising barbeque addressed by BNP activist Pete Rushton. In Darlington, Paul Thompson and local members celebrated Paul's birthday with more than 50 people attending a night of patriotic songs and face painting.

Swansea BNP launched

• The first meeting of Swansea BNP generated large amounts of press coverage. With 20 local BNP members attending, and with 20 other members turned away by the police, the meeting heard Party Chairman Nick Griffin, and former LibDem parliamentary candidate and community politics expert Shane Sinclair, who has now joined the BNP. Shane is determined to help build a Helping Hand team to campaign on local issues and to help build the BNP in South Wales.

North East BNP to fight two seats!

• North East England BNP are gearing up to fight not one, but two seats in the coming General Election. Sunderland South and Sunderland North, both Labour seats are to be contested. Local activists have been busy putting out a simple and effective leaflet, and see the forthcoming campaign as a springboard for council elections next year. Dave Guynan (pictured left), is standing in Sunderland North, and Joe Dobbie is standing in Sunderland South.

Griffin in Cumbria

• A meeting of Cumbria BNP on the 14th April saw Nick Griffin give a good speech to local members and activists. Examining the Foot and Mouth crisis, and explaining how the BNP would rebuild Britain into a great, peaceful and free nation like it used to be. A raffle was held which helped to raise local funds.

THE PARTY IN BRIEF... A ROUND UP OF THE MONTH'S PARTY NEWS

Treacy and other BNP members in the town.

■ The keen team of BNP activists in the Hull area finally got a publicity reward when their left-wing MP Kevin McNamara showed just how weak his self-proclaimed support for 'human rights' is when he called on the police to prosecute BNP members for putting out leaflets. As a result of McNamara's fascist outburst, the local paper quoted extensively from the leaflet in an article entitled "Anti-refugee leaflets 'break no law.'"

■ Nearly 30 local members, plus a couple of babes-in-arms, laid out a BNP market stall in busy Mirfield High Street in Dewsbury. Shoppers were handed leaflets and the party's ground-breaking election CD. Many stopped to talk, with at least 75% being very much in the BNP's favour.

■ This month saw a pre-election meeting in Croydon addressed by Director of Publicity Paul Golding and party founder John Tyndall. Attended by around 30 local members, the meeting saw reports from local activist Bob Gertner, local organiser Paul Ballard and was chaired by Croydon stalwart, Mike Barnes.

■ Coventry BNP held a lively meeting attended by Party Chairman Nick Griffin and National Press Officer Dr. Phil Edwards and chaired by local organiser Mark Matthews. Introduced was the party's candidate for Coventry North East, John Sheppard. The collection raised £139, and ten local activists who had each pledged £50 towards the deposit, handed in a total of £500. Work has begun with a special localised issue of the BNP's newspaper, Freedom.

■ An excellent social/meeting took place in Kent on the 3rd of May, attended by local organiser Dennis Whiting, Paul Golding and BNP stalwart Colin Smith. Kent is an area with great potential for the BNP. Local organiser Dennis Whiting is standing in the forthcoming County Council Elections.

■ Radio coverage: National Press Officer Dr. Phil Edwards on a local radio station in Dundee, Scotland, and on BBC Radio Wales. Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber giving an excellent show on Choice FM. Technology Director Simon Darby, Administration Director Chris Green, Black Country organiser John Salvage and Oldham's Mick Treacy took over a Talk Radio debate. Party Chairman Nick Griffin made an appearance on BBC Radio Wales, and on Radio 4 with none other than black agitator Lee Jasper! Swansea activist Andrew Toose got over some excellent points on Radio Wales. Tony Lecomber once again gave a good showing on Three Counties Radio. Local radio stations in the North West also heard from Nick Griffin, and from Oldham organiser Mick

Golding in Ulster on party education visit

• BNP Director of Publicity Paul Golding visited Northern Ireland this month to train Ulster BNP activists to use the latest Desktop Publishing technology. Mr Golding was given a tour of the troubled areas and some of the sites of the province by Ulster BNP stalwart Alan Moore. The evening saw a social in which Mr. Golding met all the key people, including new Ulster BNP organiser Andy McIlorie, who during the 80s led the huge Ulster National Front branch.

Initiative and growth in Lewisham & Bromley!

• The growing Lewisham & Bromley branch of the BNP held a pre-election meeting on the 11th April chaired by candidate and local secretary, Barry Roberts. Local organiser Richard Brook was first up with a round-up of local activities. The meeting then heard the main speaker, Director of Publicity Paul Golding, who spoke about the General Election and the state of the nation. "40,000 years of white, European civilisation coming to an end in this country.... It is our duty to save it, and secure a future for our country and our people!" Barry Roberts, BNP prospective parliamentary candidate for Lewisham East, will be backed by the most professional campaign the party has ever run in London. A full colour warm-up leaflet has already been distributed to 20,000 homes, and a 'double drop' of 10,000 more full colour leaflets is underway. A huge poster is ready for display on a prominent billboard in the heart of the constituency, and adverts have been booked in local newspapers. Canvassing will start in key wards as soon as the last leaflets are out.

BNP victory in Burnley!

• Not only has dynamic Burnley organiser Steve Smith appeared repeatedly in the local press while involved in various good causes including a petition against animal cruelty which was handed to a local animal sanctuary, but a huge 'Vote British National Party' banner (pictured right) has been hanging for weeks on a mill chimney by a busy main road in the town. Local council Jobsworths tried to get it taken down but failed, leading to more useful press coverage about the 'BNP victory.'

Griffin, Jackson and Treacy speak in Oldham

• This month saw around 50 members and supporters from in and around Oldham enjoy an excellent meeting for the adoption as General Election candidates of Mick Treacy, the popular local organiser, to stand in Oldham East, and Party Chairman Nick Griffin for Oldham West. The meeting was chaired by North West regional organiser Chris Jackson. The meeting saw testimonials from Stuart Pollitt, an ex-para, a local lady, and speeches by Messrs Treacy and Griffin.

NOTEPAD

• Identity magazine is always on the look out for new writers to contribute articles for publication. If you think you can write and want to publish some of your writings, please send them to PO Box 28, Erth, DA8 2ZN. Please make them topical, interesting, and no longer than 800 words.

• Congratulations to Ian Edwards and his wife June on the birth of their son, George. Young George weighed in at 7lbs 2oz.

• We are also very pleased to welcome back long-standing BNP activist Chris Jackson as North West Regional Organiser.

• Happy birthday to party founder, John Tyndall, who is 67 this month.

• Funds appeal "BUILDING BLOCKS" FUND

While the Labour and Tory parties are bankrolled by multi-million donations from big businessmen buying influence and knight-hoods, the British National Party has only one source of funds - the ordinary, decent men and women who are its members and supporters.

Building Blocks fund targets:

- 1) Training and equipping regional treasurers £1,000;
- 2) Top quality anti-virus software for 12 key computers £500;
- 3) Internet radio station £3,000;

■ MTV degeneracy

Two teenaged American girls are taking US television giant MTV to court in Los Angeles after they were sprayed with faeces during the filming of an episode of a new MTV programme, Dude, This Sucks. The teenagers were part of a studio audience watching two male performers - the "Shower Rangers" - who had been dosed with a powerful laxative before going on stage, dressed as Boy Scouts. On cue they turned their backs to the audience, dropped their trousers, bent over, and sprayed the front row with liquid faeces. MTV is owned by billionaire media mogul Sumner Redstone, who also owns CBS.

■ 'International' double-standards

As more and more war criminals from the brutal conflict in the former multicultural Yugoslavia are brought before the International Court, it has become clear that rape is an all-too-common weapon of ethnic cleansing. At least, that's what the liberals say when it happens in places like Bosnia and Serbs or Croats are accused of crimes against Muslims. When it happens in places like Bradford, however, with young Muslim thugs attacking local girls, it doesn't get any further than the local paper.

■ No arrests for anti-white rioting in Cincinnati

A US-based "civil rights for whites" group is demanding hate crime prosecution of black rioters following a wave of brutal anti-white racist attacks during riots in Cincinnati. The National Organization For European American Rights (N.O.F.E.A.R.) has also blamed the media for creating a "climate of racial hatred against Whites." The violence flared after a black crime suspect was shot dead by a policeman. The media set about portraying this as a racist killing. N.O.F.E.A.R. National Community Relations Director Vincent Edwards said: "If white mobs had rioted and attacked blacks, this would be a national scandal and an all out effort would be made to arrest white rioters and charge them with hate crimes. These so-called Hate Crime laws are not only discriminatory, but they are unconstitutionally targeting whites for selective arrest and prosecution."

FORWARD ITALY!

After forty five years of the cloying stench of the capitalist corruption of the mainstream right Christian Democratic Party and the perpetual incompetence of the parties of the Communist left, at last Italy may be about to draw a fresh democratic breath.

Forza Italia leader, Silvio Berlusconi

Silvio Berlusconi's Forza Italia party looks likely to win the Italian general election as we go to press, in spite of the usual sustained media assault and lies by the organised forces of reaction and communism.

Grand alliance

Promising to "smash Communism" and restore traditional Italian values, democratise the media and enforce the law, Forza Italia has sent a shudder down the yellow spines of the plutocrats and the Communists at the thought of power slipping from their sweaty palms and passing once more to ordinary, decent Italians.

Berlusconi himself leaves a fair bit to be desired - for a start he models his policies to an unhealthy extent on the image put across by Margaret Thatcher. But he has had the undoubted courage to make common cause with the Italian Nationalist party the Alleanza Nazionale (AN) of Gianfranco Fini and Umberto Bossi's Lega Nord. The Lega Nord (Northern League) in particular has become in recent years an outspoken opponent of the flood of Third World and Islamic immigrants now pouring into the country.

Immigration

Over the last few years, this influx of immigrants into Italy has led to a massive rise in crime and welfare bills for hardworking Italians already struggling against mafia-run economic corruption and leftist political corruption. Fleets of rusting, semi-derelict cargo ships run by criminal smuggling gangs and groaning beneath the weight of thousands of Immigrants are regularly scuttled on the shores of Italy. As a result of this most large Italian cities have undergone a radical change over the last few years, with many areas becoming virtual Islamic enclaves.

Islamisation

One of the most symbolically shocking results of this mass immigration into Italy was the inauguration of a mosque in election for Europe is immense. At last we can see that the organised forces of the far left, that have managed to manipulate themselves into power across Europe over the last decade, are in retreat, while their notional opponents in the plutocratic 'right' are also tarnished by corruption and association with multiculturalism.

Forza Italia may be about to banish from the sun-soaked soil of Italy the last shadows of the Communist parties and corrupt mafia lackeys that have lingered in the country since the end of the Cold War. And, even if Berlusconi loses his nerve if he takes power, it is likely that in doing so he will open the door to genuine nationalists with stronger principles. But it's not just about Italy.

The peoples of Europe as a whole are sick of watching their countries being torn apart by the politically correct bigots of the far left, the social utopians of bourgeois liberalism and the forces of international finance capitalism that have united beneath the banner of multiculturalism.

A strong ethnic nationalist bloc is growing in influence in many European nations, most notably France, Austria, Belgium, Italy

Left: Umberto Bossi, leader of the Lega Nord (Northern League). Right: Gianfranco Fini, leader of the Alleanza Nazionale (National Alliance). Both are to be included in the coalition government.

Rome. After witnessing the inauguration of the mosque the speaker of the Chamber of Deputies, Irene Pivetti of Lega Nord, attended a special mass to pray for Italy to be forgiven.

The importance of the Italian and now, at last, in Great Britain. It may still take some years, but the Europe-wide trend towards the politics of nationalism and identity is unmistakable and irresistible.

● A series on the myths and legends of the British Isles by Stephen McDonald

THE LEGEND OF QUEEN BOADICEA

The recent proposal by Blair's Government to allow Britain's female soldiers to operate in the front line may seem to many Identity readers a damaging and Politically Correct action to take. However in times past females had a much greater role in the physical protection of clan, family and society than we may believe or realise.

This beautiful bronze statue of a defiant and noble Boadicea by Thomas Thornycroft was commissioned by the London City Council in 1902. It stands on the Thames Embankment in Central London

The Roman historian Tacitus gives us detailed information about how, in the days before the conversion of our folk to Christ-worshipping Germanic speakers, females would accompany the men folk to the point of battle and be physically involved in taunting the enemy, acting like Furies weaving in and out of the enemy ranks. One of our island's greatest female warriors is the legendary Boadicea (Boudicca), Queen of the Iceni. The Iceni were a British tribe living in East Anglia and when her husband King Prasutagus died in AD60 the Roman administrators seized his lands. Boadicea fiercely protested but she was imprisoned, flogged and her two teenage daughters were brutally raped.

A warrior

This was a violation that Boadicea could not accept and she urged her folk to take revenge against the Roman occupiers. She led an army of over 100,000 Iceni towards the Roman garrison town of Colchester. With the Governor, Suetonius Paulinus busy attacking Britons on the Isle of Mona (Anglesey) she was able to sack this important Roman town easily.

ly. Destruction was total, not a single Roman was left alive and the entire town was burned to the ground after a two day siege.

The Iceni were an advanced British tribe living in East Anglia. They struck their own coinage for over a century before their demise at the hands of the Romans

The rebellion marched onto London, then the main trading town of Roman Britain. Although Suetonius had been alerted and was marching his men back from Wales he was not able to save the city from the ravages of the Britons. The rebellion now turned north to St. Albans (Verulamium), Boadicea's intention was now clear - to remove utterly the Roman presence from Britain.

British tribes

St. Albans had received warning and the inhabitants were largely evacuated but the town was destroyed in the same brutal way. The Iceni army was now joined by other tribes including the Trinovantes, and sought out the Imperial Army which was gathering in Warwickshire for the final battle. Tacitus records the rallying speech of Boadicea before the battle and she ends....

"you will see that in this battle you must conquer or die. This is a woman's resolve; as for men, they may live and be slaves."

The British tribes were highly confident of victory but the organised and disciplined Roman troops, numbering only 10,000, were the victors. Their weapons and training proving their superiority. 80,000 Britons were slain compared to a "few hundred" Romans. Tradition says that Boudicea survived the final battle only to return to her home and poison herself. It is extremely unlikely that Emperor Nero would have exercised clemency in her case. The Romans laid waste to the Iceni farms; they desecrated sanctuaries, stole family heirlooms and deprived the people of their weapons. Thousands were enslaved to drain the Fens.

A clarion call!

No one knows the final resting place of Boadicea, legend says she lies under Kings Cross Station but the spirit of our ancestral queen lies, albeit dormant in the breast of every Briton today. The BNP will help awaken that spirit so we too will prove we will not be slaves under a foreign power!

MONTHLY REVIEW JOHN ARMSTRONG

The Philosophy of Nationalism: by Charles Conant Josey

This highly readable book, first published nearly eighty years ago in 1923, belongs to that highly important genre of pessimistic treatises perhaps exemplified by Spengler's, Decline of the West in Germany, and Lothrop Stoddard's, Rising Tide Of Colour, in the USA. The Philosophy of Nationalism is set against the background of the massive dysgenic effect of World War 1, when the best of European manhood had been slaughtered and throughout Europe civilisation had been upended and Bolshevism set loose.

Josey a distinguished British academic worried that nationalism which had been the motor of human progress over the past three hundred years was being discredited amongst the elites of Europe and America and that the insidious doctrines of internationalism were coming to the fore.

Prophetic

Josey predicts that foreign aid and freetrade will strengthen the economies of Asia, and western science will promote a rapid rise in what we term the Third World birthrate, leading to mass emigration into Europe and the USA. He was a prophet indeed. However this book's real importance lies in its castigation of elites who preach the brotherhood of men whilst ignoring the plight of the poor under their own noses in their own lands. He argues conclusively that these "sympathetic impulses" are endangering the group survival of Western Man.

A blueprint

This book should be required reading for the representatives of all the Establishment Parties, written as a warning, its pages at times read like a blueprint for the decline of the Western World which took place in the twentieth century

THE BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY AND THE GENERAL ELECTION

With race, anti-white violence, and the asylum issue constantly in the news, the general election of 2001 couldn't come at a better time for the BNP. Small wonder, then, that a few people have expressed surprise that the party is fighting only around 30 seats. "Our vote is bound to go up, and our leaflets are sure to bring in loads of enquiries," they say, "so shouldn't we be spreading our efforts more widely?"

The answer is 'no.' Yes, our votes probably will go up, and we aim to achieve the highest average BNP vote ever - a target which is best achieved by concentrating, rather than dispersing, our resources. But however well we do we still can't expect to win seats at parliamentary level before we have won a good number of local council elections. And however well one does in first-past-the-post elections, only the winners get prizes.

Follow-ups needed!

It's true that a bigger 'throw-out' of leaflets would produce more enquiries. But enquiries by themselves are virtually useless. Almost no-one joins just because they've received an information pack. With the exception of a tiny handful of strong-minded natural innovators, shown by scientific research to amount to no more than 3% of the population, no-one 'buys' anything new because of their own opinion of something they read for themselves. All the rest need to see other people adopting the new idea before they feel safe to follow suit. This is why getting an enquiry and sending off an information pack just isn't enough. Enquirers have to receive personal visits from well dressed, confident, friendly, BNP spokesmen and -women. And they have to get such visits within a couple of weeks of getting the information, preferably even sooner. This is why spending thousands of pounds to get extra enquiries which we do not have the mobile manpower to follow-up quickly enough is a waste of money. The classic example of the failure of such tried-and-tested stupidity was the effort of the old National Front in 1979. By contesting more than 300 seats, it got around 10,000 enquiries. The sackfuls of mail were so full that it took literally months to sort them, send out the packs, and dispatch the follow-ups to local organisers. This time-lag, as much as the fact that the party was soon to fall victim to a series of disastrous splits, was the reason for the total failure to convert such huge public interest into organisational growth.

Target wards

The BNP, by contrast, is contesting enough seats to get a goodly number of follow-ups in our key areas, but not so many that we won't be able to deal with them quickly. And, once this leads to the recruitment of more new members, they will be in precisely the places where we need them most - near our target wards for next year's local elections, which are contests where we stand a realistic chance of winning, or at least getting headline- and credibility-grabbing votes of above 20%.

Similarly, as we won't be overstretching our manpower by racing around contesting extra constituencies, we will have time to train more people in the techniques needed actually to win seats in the future, particularly canvassing and making sure our voters get to the polls.

The fact that, all over the country, our officials and activists are settling down to this intensive grass-roots work, rather than getting over-excited by all the race-related dramas in the news, displays better than anything the way in which the BNP has grown up politically in recent years.

What is needed

It's a bit like the order given to British soldiers in the days of the Brown Bess musket: "Don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes." Putting all our efforts into a ragged volley against the big battalions of the old parties when our main targets are out of range would be the mark of an ill-disciplined rabble. This general election is very important, and a good wave of last-minute donations are needed to enable us to meet our targets of increased votes and recruitment in our key areas. But, for all that, it is primarily a training exercise for us. No one should get carried away and break ranks. We need everyone to work together to use this contest to lay the foundations for future victories.

HELP THE BNP WITH THE ELECTION IMPACT FUND

The Election Impact Fund will be used to help the BNP make an extra impact in several key parts of the country:

Inner East London. White flight makes it unusually hard to build a financially sound base, but the remaining whites are more likely than ever to vote BNP;

Outer East London. An area of immense future potential, where we still need that extra push to get properly established;

Leicester. A generous new member has offered to pay the £500 deposit for a second seat in a city where white working class voters are disgusted by Keith Vaz. Help is needed paying for the election address.

Lancashire. We need to fight a second seat in powderkeg Oldham - a town where we didn't even have a proper organisation not long ago. We also want to throw extra resources at another seat where we're looking for the best ever BNP parliamentary vote in the North West.

IT'S TIME TO PUT OUR MONEY WHERE OUR MOUTH IS!

£1,280 already raised!

To achieve these 'icing on the cake' extras and make the most out of the coming General Election, the BNP must raise £4,000 within the next month.
